

Abstract Of The Disclosure

A navigational device, where an input destination is first clearly and unambiguously determined on the basis of a data record stored in the navigational device, and, only then, is this destination transmitted to a central processing unit for purposes of route determination.